OHIO UNIVERSITY Alumni Journal

i love ohio u

The biggest news at Ohio University these days is an all-out effort to recruit new students and to cut down on the number of students who leave school for various reasons. This particular aspect of university effort has become necessary because of an unprecedented drop in student enrollment which has hit not only Ohio University but also most of the colleges in the nation this year.

The entire University community has seemingly come to the fore offering assistance in improving the enrollment picture at Ohio University. A task force on recommended policies and projects, named in November, was charged with exploring many suggestions for reversing the downward trend in enrollment. Assistance, through further ideas and helpful criticism, has been proffered by many individuals, and task force requests for information and assistance have been willingly met by many offices.

The efforts to date are already impressive. Numerous small, inexpensive and hopefully helpful projects are underway by academic departments and the Admissions Office. These are aimed toward boosting enrollment, attracting serious students and retaining them for a full four years.

One effort, an example of the kinds of participation in the drive, is a student written and produced tabloid being done by an advanced journalism class. It will present the students' view of the University and will be sent through the Admissions Office to high school guidance counselors, high school libraries and prospective students. Publishing date is February 15.

The Admissions Office has also made plans to meet with large groups of school counselors from Ohio schools to offer multi-media presentations on Ohio University and what it offers the students. These programs are sponsored in the hope that high school administrators and counselors will come to know Ohio University as an institution which they can recommend to their students.

The Alumni Office has entered wholeheartedly in plans to encourage a growing enrollment and to serve the student through the four years he will spend at Ohio University. Many of the projects which are tentatively planned can be implemented only with alumni support. It is hoped that those alumni with a commitment to Ohio University will join in the recruitment/retention effort.

The Alumni Association is currently working on a project under the title Topcat which relies completely on alumni participation. An alumnus who volunteers as a member of this program can serve by welcoming new graduates to his town or community, counseling students in a job area, or possibly by opening doors to potential jobs for our graduating students.

In one of the pilot efforts in the Topcat program, Kris Steiner, an economics major, visited Akron and was counseled by banker Vincent DiGirolamo, '59. Remarking on the value of the program, she stated "the experience gave me a broader outlook on the practical aspects of economics, and I received information which has helped me in selecting courses which will round out my major."

A new promotional film on the University has also been developed which is available to alumni who wish to meet with groups of high school students at college nights or similar programs. The fast-paced 16 minute color film, which has little dialogue, is backed with a soundtrack by the Ohio University symphony orchestra. The University representative showing the film can add information appropriate to the audience, be it an alumni gathering or a group of potential students.

The film was also incorporated into a video tape to be shown by commercial television stations as a public service program. The half-hour program, generally oriented to aid in student recruitment, was first broadcast February 4 on WSAZ, Huntington, West Virginia.

In a project to publicize not only Ohio University but also the new rule allowing freshmen to have cars on campus, a bumper sticker, reproduced above has been developed and will be sent to all applying freshmen. Alumni may obtain these stickers by writing to the Alumni Office.

Trustee's Academy Welcomes Seven

Adler

Baldwin

The Trustees Academy, Ohio University's major group of individual donors ended 1972 in a big way with seven new members. In pledging gifts to Ohio University these benefactors clearly state their concern for continued excellence within the University.

To become a member of the Trustees' Academy, an alumnus or friend meets one of the society's conditions for membership: 1) provide an outright gift of $10,000 cash, securities, real or personal property; 2) pledge an annual minimum of $1,000 for ten years, or 3) provide a deferred gift through an irrevocable life insurance agreement in the amount of $25,000 or in the form of a trust, bequest, life income contract or other deferred types of contributions.

Herbert Adler, '39, is president of Bobbie Brooks Inc., a major manufacturer of young women's apparel with an annual volume of 150 million dollars. A member of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants and the Accountants Club, Mr. Adler was awarded the Alumni Association's Certificate of Merit in October 1972. His gift to the University is unrestricted. Mr. Adler is married with three children.

Richard Baldwin is a native Athenian, who through long association with Ohio University feels familiar with the school and its goals. Mr. Baldwin began his career in insurance with Western and Southern Life in Athens and currently is general agent at Volunteer State Life Insurance Company in Columbus, Ohio. He is a member of the National Association of Life Underwriters and past president of the Athens Life Underwriters Association. Mr. Baldwin's gift is unrestricted. He is married to the former Diane Yothers of Alliance, Ohio.

A joint membership is received by Mr. and Mrs. William Whaley. Mr. Whaley, '62, is an agent with the American General Life Insurance Company in Athens. He recently purchased half of Swearingen Sporting Goods. Mr. and Mrs. Whaley's gift is restricted to athletics and it expresses their loyalty to Ohio University.

Earl H. Funk has recently acquired a partnership in Swearingen's Sporting Goods in Athens. Mr. Funk has also willingly assumed the Trustees Academy Membership originally begun by Mr. Swearingen. Mr. Funk is the past president of the Athens Kiwanis Club and resides with his wife and two children in Athens.

John Stephen Rowe, '67, has recently purchased and redesigned the Athena movie theater in Athens. Previously he was the manager of the University Shop. While attending the University, Mr. Rowe was a member of Phi Gamma Delta and manager of the baseball team. His unrestricted gift expresses his appreciation for the friends and associates he made at Ohio University. Mr. Rowe and his wife Lorraine reside in Athens.

Dr. James L. Shreffler, '50, an anesthesiologist and former Chief of Staff at Schoitz Memorial Hospital in Iowa has restricted half his membership to athletics and half to The Rush Elliott Professorship. Dr. Shreffler is a member of both the American Board of Anesthesiologists and the American College of Anesthesiologists. During the 1972 Homecoming he was inducted into Ohio University's Athletic Hall of Fame. Dr. Shreffler, his wife and two children live in Cedar Falls, Iowa.

Michael Elsass, '70, president of Elsass and Associates, an insurance investment agency in Athens, joins the Academy as one of its youngest members. Mr. Elsass resides in Athens where he also serves as resident supervisor of Delta Tau Delta. His gift is unrestricted.

T A Banquet

To honor the members of the Trustees' Academy who have devoted time, resources and finances to the University, a banquet was held October 28th at John W. Galbreath's Darby Dan Farm.

Included in the day's program were a tour of the 5,000 acre farm, a business meeting that included presentations by President Claude Sowle and the vice-presidents concerning their particular area within the university, and a banquet with entertainment by the University's School of Music Opera Theater.

Presently, the 142 member academy is approaching a gross worth of $7 million to Ohio University.

MRS. JOHNS APPOINTED UNIVERSITY TRUSTEE

The appointment of Dorothy S. Johns, dean of students at the private Laurel School in Cleveland, to the Ohio University Board of Trustees has filled out the board to its complement of nine members. Mrs. Johns will serve the remaining six years of a term vacated by the resignation last May of Wayne E. Brown.

The announcement of Mrs. Johns' appointment was made in November by Ohio Governor John J. Gilligan. She is the second woman to serve on the board, joining Mrs. Jody Galbreath Phillips.

Mrs. Johns has a background in education and journalism, having worked as a teacher and counselor in addition to her present duties, and having worked for newspapers in Pennsylvania and Wisconsin. She received her M.A. from Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland and her B.A. from the University of Wisconsin.

Upon her appointment Mrs. Johns said she was impressed with the vitality and diversity at Ohio University, noting it has been sensitive and responsive to the changing needs of today's young people. She called it one of the most effective units in the state system of higher education.

Any alumnus wishing to aid in the efforts to recruit students, and we hope there will be many, should contact J. David Scott at the Alumni/Development Office, P. O. Drawer 869, Athens, Ohio 45701. Fact sheets and a pamphlet of supporting materials will be available by the end of winter quarter, and with alumni help Ohio University may be able to develop a group of volunteer area representatives throughout the country who can support and publicize Ohio University by making information on the school readily available in a personal way.

Budget Guidelines Announced

Ohio University President Claude R. Sowle announced Tuesday (Dec. 5) a lean, well trimmed budget of $43 million for the 1973-74 fiscal year and an administrative reorganization which consolidates the management of some areas and reduces the level of activity in others.

Sowle's announcement included budgetary guidelines for the major areas within the university to permit drafting of detailed budgets showing actual reductions in the level of personnel and programs. The detailed budgets will be proposed and discussed during the university's open budget hearings in February.

One aspect of the general guidelines for the 1973-74 budget, which represents a cutback of $3 million from this year's original budget, is a realignment of positions at the university's top administrative level.

Two offices have been eliminated—those of the vice president for Educational Services and the assistant to the president for Planning, Budgeting and Information Systems. Their responsibilities have been assigned to other officers.

In addition, another senior administrative position, the associate vice president and dean of Faculties, has been elevated a notch to a vice presidency for Academic Services. This post will be filled by Dr. Edward Penson, formerly the associate vice president.

Another change moved the office of regional higher education, which is responsible for branch campus operations, under the coordination of an executive vice president and dean of Faculties. This move, said Sowle, "will promote closer cooperation among all of the university's academic endeavors, irrespective of location."

The move will merge much of the administration of the main campus and regional campus academic programs, allowing an 8.9 per cent or $460,000 reduction in administration of the regional campuses.

Elimination of the office of a vice president for educational services will allow administrative cutbacks expected to save $186,000 or 18.9 per cent of this year's educational services budget.

Services provided in this area will be administered next year under academic services, again coordinated by the executive vice president and dean of faculties.

Another major budgetary cut will be a $150,000 reduction in university support of Intercollegiate Athletics. With income from ICA activities projected for next year, this move provides an operating budget of $974,619, and reflects a 9 per cent reduction from ICA's expense level at the beginning of the current year. Administration of ICA, under the new alignment, will be under the vice president and treasurer.

The general effects of the budget plan for next year, Sowle said, will probably mean fewer faculty members and therefore larger classes and possible elimination of some "high cost, low enrollment" programs; reduced services and therefore "longer lines" at the university's health and psychological services centers; severe reduction in planning and development of new Administrative Data Processing systems; campus and buildings not quite as clean; and "things a little more ragged around the edges."

Reductions in the 1973-74 university budget have been necessitated primarily because of a drop in enrollment this year of nearly 1700 students. The budget for the current fiscal year has already been trimmed twice as a result of the lower enrollment.

The enrollment decrease has proved to be a result of student dropout rather than of a decrease in enrolling freshmen, and the university is conducting a strenuous campaign to discover the reasons which cause a student to leave Ohio University before graduation, as well as to attract new students and encourage present students to remain.

The chart reproduced below indicates reasons cited by students in a telephone survey for dropping out of Ohio University. As many of the students indicated several reasons, the chart totals more than 100 per cent.

The budget plan for 1973-74 is tentative and will be discussed throughout February in open budget hearings before a final working budget is decided upon.

Alumni Campaign Mail Gifts High

With six months remaining in the current academic year (ending June 30, 1973) alumni direct mail contributions have exceeded the previous twelve month totals.

The Alumni Annual Campaign, which has paralleled the needs of the University as defined to you through reports in previous issues of the Journal, has brought responses from alumni in record numbers thus far.

As of December 31, 1972, 2,720 gifts totaling $56,631 have been received along with 242 pledge payments which have increased the total direct mail figures to $70,676. Comparable figures for December 31, of last year were 1,096 gifts totaling $23,800 or nearly three times fewer dollars.

The twelve month Annual Alumni Campaign via direct mail for the previous academic and fiscal year totaled 2,327 contributors and $52,166.

"Continued support of this magnitude for the balance of the year will certainly help relieve the pressure to programs being curtailed by recent budget adjustments," stated Jack G. Ellis, Director of Development.

Dr. Edwards stands in front Accelerator Lab named after him.

The Ohio University Accelerator Laboratory has been named in honor of Dr. John E. Edwards, the University's first Distinguished Professor of Physics and a member of the faculty for 40 years.

Construction of the accelerator lab at Ohio University, which houses an 11 million volt tandem Van De Graaff accelerator, brought a permanent home for the research introduced more than two decades ago by Dr. Edwards.

He was first to use radioactive isotopes on campus and, in the early 1950's, he established the isotope committee that became the nucleus for the present Radiation Safety Committee.

The author of many research publications and three laboratory manuals, Dr. Edwards is nationally known as a researcher in the fields of X-ray spectroscopy and nuclear physics and as an outstanding teacher.

He came to Ohio University in 1932, served as chairman of the Physics Department from 1951 to 1957, and became, in 1962, the first member of the physics faculty to be named Distinguished Professor. He was awarded emeritus status in May 1972.

A native of Athens, Dr. Edwards received both B.S. and M.A. degrees from Ohio University. In 1947, he was granted the Ph.D. from Ohio State University.

Alumni Board Of Directors Meets in Fall

Prof. James Shipman, Secretary
Alumni Board of Directors

On October 20, 1972, the Ohio University Alumni Board of Directors met to discuss goals and projects for 1972-73.

It was reported that during the 1972-73 year, gift donations from all sources are expected to total $1,300,000, and the Trustees' Academy hopes to increase its ranks by 30 new members. Due to the financial crisis at the University, alumni will be asked to participate actively in the recruitment and fund raising programs which are being developed to ease the enrollment and financial problems, and improve the image of Ohio University.

A new decision was reached pertaining to the Alumni Journal. Due to lack of funds it has become necessary that all publications be sent to those alumni who contribute a minimum of ten dollars a year. All publications will also be sent to Trustees' Academy members and life members of the Alumni Association. All issues of the Journal and The Ohio Magazine will be sent to each new graduate of the University for one year following graduation. The Journal's main purpose is to promote financial support, to let the alumni know of the growth and development of the University and to inform them of the general State of the University.

The Thomas Ewing Society, which consists of about 90 former Board members is being reactivated. Members of the Society will help in recruitment, fund raising, job counseling and placement of alumni.

It was reported that 1971-72 was quite a successful year for fund raising in spite of a decline in corporate and foundation support. With the help of Dr. Robert L. Morton's gift of $366,000, the total for 1971-72 amounted to $1,466,000.

It was recognized that the Trustees' Academy has grown tremendously in the last two years. Including eight recent additions, the Academy now has 142 members.

Alumni Director David Scott reported that last year's Alumni Weekend activities were received very well and that approximately 160 alumni attended. More alumni are encouraged to attend next year's reunion on June 15, 16, 17. The Alumni Association is trying to develop many new programs and needs people willing to become involved. All alumni are welcome. Official reunion will be held for those graduating classes ending in "3" or "8."

The next annual meeting of the Alumni Board of Directors is scheduled for June 8, 1973. The Board will close the Association's business for the year and discuss and evaluate both this year's events and the Association's progress.

One of the main functions of the meeting will be the election of five new members for three-year terms. The board will also make selections for alumni awards. Nomination forms for both board members and the Certificate of Merit Award are included in this issue of the Alumni Journal.

The Board of Directors of the Alumni Association represents the alumni and acts as a liaison between the alumni and the University. Meetings of the board are held twice a year, once during Homecoming weekend and once during Commencement Week in June. The officers of the board are elected for two-year terms.

Reunion '73

Nostalgia levels are running high this year and nowhere higher than at Ohio University's annual reunion. The 32 marching men of Ohio bear little resemblance to the 110 marching men of today, and much of the campus has changed. Maybe it's a good time to come back and take a look. Alumni Weekend—June 15, 16, and 17—isn't as far off as you might think. We can't go into detail at the moment, largely because all of the details haven't been set up yet, but we can give you a hint.

There'll be all your favorite events—the reception and wine tasting party followed by a buffet dinner, the Alumni Luncheon on Saturday, class meetings and chances to get together with old friends, campus tours, films of Ohio University, past and present, a fantastic T-Bone Steak Fry for a finale. University facilities for golf, tennis, swimming, bowling, handball and an assortment of other activities will be open for alumni use.

And if your class ends with a "3" or an "8" it's a reunion year for you. The Golden Anniversary Class is 1923, and class members from that year will be entertained as guests of the University.

Housing in residence halls can be arranged for single rooms or for apartment style modules if you wish to call other classmates and share an apartment for a "reunion within a reunion." As an alternative, accommodations with TV/air conditioning may be reserved at the Ohio University Inn.

If you'd like to make arrangements to come with friends but have lost addresses, get in touch with David Scott, Director of Alumni Affairs, and he will do his best to provide them.

The idea of a mini-university is also a possibility. If you would be interested in planning to come back to campus a few days early for seminars with some of our most distinguished professors, please indicate that you would below and make some suggestions as to the type of material you would like to see included.

Please use the form given below to obtain a complete brochure on reunion '73.

I'd like to return to Ohio University in June for the reunion of the Class of _____. I'd be interested in returning early for a mini-university _____, and I recommend _____ as a possible seminar topic.

How To Give to Your Own Advantage

The major purpose of the Development Office is to encourage private monetary assistance for Ohio University. The Alumni Journal publishes this reprint to advise prospective donors of salient methods of giving which are of interest to the University and also of possible benefit to the donor.

Gifts to Old Ivy: How to make them count most

Your alma mater is no doubt constantly reminding you that it is more blessed to give than to receive. But it isn't all that simple to give these days. If you want to help out your old school, and get the most benefit from your gift, make sure you and your tax adviser consider all the options carefully.

The simplest way to donate is, of course, to make an outright gift. For tax purposes, you can deduct gifts up to 50% of your adjusted gross income and carry any excess over for as long as five years.

Deferred gifts are now becoming more popular, in light of recent tax changes. You give the school securities, or a specific amount of cash, which it manages. The school then pays you — or your beneficiary — all or part of the income which that property generates until you or the beneficiary dies. Then the full gift goes to the school. In this way, you can receive some income for life, and also deduct the present value of the deferred gift, up to 50% of your adjusted gross income. Harvard, for one, recommends the deferred gift, or living trust, for donors over 60 who want to entrust at least $100,000. Other deferred gift plans are in the works for donors of as little as $10,000.

You might prefer to remember your alma mater in your will of course. But your estate will suffer. "The inheritance tax laws are written in such a way that Harvard will be glad to prove to any prospective donor with $250,000 or more in his estate that it will be to his advantage to give money to his favorite college right now," notes Henry F. Colt, the university's director of development. He adds that giving through a foundation, rather than directly, will often mean a bigger tax bite.

Stock gifts have many advantages

Not only is the timing of your gift important, so is the form in which you give it. You might prefer giving stock rather than cash. And stock, of course, can appreciate. For example, the $20-million worth of stock which former Xerox Chairman Joseph Wilson donated in trust to the University of Rochester in 1965 and 1967 is now worth double that amount.

Giving stock also means possible tax advantages for you. "As a general rule, no matter what your tax bracket. It will always be to your advantage to give long-term appreciated securities rather than to sell those stocks and give an equivalent amount of cash," says Colt.

Note: If you want to regain your investment from your securities, and donate only the capital gain, check with your alma mater first. The "bargain sale" gift lost allure due to recent tax changes but might still offer tax benefits.

Unrestricted gifts are most welcome

No matter what or how much you give, you can attach strings to your gift: how it is to be managed, how the income is to be spent, and who the recipients are to be. But schools much prefer unrestricted gifts.

If you have a substantial amount to donate, you may want to set up a chair in a particular field of study. But it is costly: In recent weeks, RCA and Mitsubishi put up $1-million each to establish chairs at Harvard.

If you want your name to be associated with a gift, but have no particular project or field of study you wish to contribute to, contact the school — they will have plenty of suggestions. At many schools, courses of study that deal with social problems, for example, are starved for funds. So, too, are many science programs, because of government cutbacks in research spending.

Th' Th' That's All Folks

If you're running out to the ol' mailbox every morning in eager anticipation of your latest copy of The Alumni Journal or The Ohio Magazine and coming back with empty hands and a sour disposition, maybe it's because you forgot to send in your personal alumni check ($10 minimum, payable to the Ohio University Fund, Inc.).

We know you don't want to miss all the news of a varied and changing campus, and what better way is there to keep in touch than through publications designed specifically for you, the alumni of Ohio University. There are six issues of The Alumni Journal published each year, and each issue is designed to give you news briefs of campus and faculty activities, as well as changes in academic and administrative areas. We also supply you with news about each other and about what the alumni groups in your area are doing.

The all new Ohio Magazine is published twice a year and offers in-depth articles of general interest concerning various aspects of the university and the people connected with it, as well as extensive photography. The December issue included sections on the new child care center operated by Ohio University, a photographic essay on the Ohio University Dance Company by Assistant Dean Frances Inge, O.U. olympic involvement, a survey on sound pollution by hearing science professors, and a postscript to the Peter Principle by Ohio University professor Lane Tracy.

Please don't let yourself miss the remaining issues for this year. If you haven't sent in your check, use the handy envelope provided, for enclosing your gift. The postage is on us. For those not wishing to contribute $10 or more to the Fund, this will be your last publication mailed this academic year. We are sorry that we cannot send all issues to everyone, but budgets are tight, and the publications we make available account for nearly 50 percent of the Alumni Association's operating grant.

Don't let yourself lose touch. We don't want to lose you.

Greek Tour

You'll leave New York on March 18, fly to Athens, Greece to start a week of touring, shopping, and browsing on the Ohio University Alumni Tour.

Included in your package price is roundtrip airfare, transfers to and from the airport in Athens, hotel accommodations — either first class or deluxe — for six nights. Taxes and tips, flight bag, passport case and luggage tags are all included.

The half-day guided tours will show you points-of-interest and historical and archaeological sites. Also included is an excursion to the islands of Aegina and Hydra. And to introduce you to Athens by Night there are refreshments at a Greek tavern and a dinner at a typically Greek night club. All this leaves ample time for your own shopping and touring.

Cost: $497.00 plus $3 departure tax per person (based on current group air fare)

Send $100 deposit immediately to assure a spot on this interesting, exciting trip. Mail to J. David Scott, Director of Alumni Affairs, Lindley Hall, Ohio University, Athens, Ohio.

Goldman Appointed New College of Education Dean Appointed

Goldman

Dr. Samuel Goldman has been appointed dean of the College of Education, succeeding Gilford W. Crowell, who resigned the position to return to teaching. At the time of his appointment Dean Goldman was a professor of education and chairman of the Department of Educational Administration and Supervision at Syracuse University.

Previously, Dr. Goldman has been on the faculty at New York University, Oklahoma State University, and the University of Chicago. He received both the Ph.D. and M.A. degrees from the University of Chicago. A Canadian by birth, he earned his B.A. degree from the University of Manitoba.

Goldman is a member of such professional organizations as the American Association of School Administrators, the American Educational Research Association, the National Conference of Professors of Educational Administration, the National Society for the Study of Education and Phi Delta Kappa.

In addition, he has served as president of the University Council for Educational Administration and as chairman of the executive committee of the National Conference of Professors of Educational Administration. He is the author of several books and articles in his field of study.

Since Goldman became Dean of College of Education he has developed several new programs. The Dean, with the assistance of Dr. Samuel Hicks, Professor Emeritus, has begun to implement a plan to establish the Southeastern Ohio, Kentucky and West

Certificate of Merit

The Certificate of Merit, presented at Homecoming, is the highest award an alumnus can receive from the Alumni Association. In bestowing it the association recognizes alumni—and on occasion nonalumni—who, through accomplishments in their fields and service to Ohio University, have been of credit not only to themselves, but to the University as well.

The awards committee feels a sense of deep responsibility to select persons truly worthy of the honor. They invite you to share this responsibility with them. Nominations should be submitted to the Alumni Office by June 1, 1973. They will then be reviewed by the awards committee of the Alumni Board. Emil S. Kustin, chairman of the committee, will be assisted by David Lundberg, Helen Matthews, Roger Scott and Robert Sefing.

Virginia Education Association. This Association, (SEOKWA), will serve to facilitate two-way communication and cooperation between the school superintendents and the College of Education.

The College has plans to offer specifically developed in-service institutes for area teachers, designed to improve their effectiveness in the classroom. These institutes will be conducted during the 1973 summer quarter and will involve more than 100 area teachers.

Other proposed services of the College of Education include Early Childhood Institute, which will prepare people to fill all levels of positions within Early Childhood Education programs, and the expansion of the Child Care Center to include perceptual-motor learning experiences for children.

A program in Community Counseling is being developed within the Department of Guidance, Counseling and Student Personnel.

New Budget Effects Women's Sports

Women's ICA Faces Difficulties

Hit hard by the November budget cuts, Women's Intercollegiate Athletics (WICA) faces the real threat of being unable to compete in spring sports. Cuts totaling $7,000 from this year's budget of $19,500 have erased the possibility of hiring a new part time coach needed for competition in winter and spring sports.

The result is not only the immediate loss to the women's sports program, but there is the long range effect that comes with cancelling meets with other schools. Competitors will keep a wary eye on the athletic team in future scheduling.

A bright note throughout all this is that Catherine Brown, WICA co-ordinator, is not afraid that the sports program will be dropped from the intercollegiate athletic budget because the women won't allow it. She credits them with the $16,000 increase for coaching staff in this year's budget because of their lobbying effort at the open budget hearings held last year. Up to that time, WICA made do with a $3,500 operating expense budget.

Women have participated in sports since 1935, but only the past two years have they been organized as Women's Intercollegiate Athletics. More than 200 women currently compete in field hockey, swimming, basketball, volleyball, tennis, golf, softball, track and field, and lacrosse.

Miss Brown emphasizes that some sports develop because the women want them. Volleyball, track, swimming and lacrosse have been added this way and currently there are demands for gymnastics and synchronized swimming.

One misconception about women's sports is that it is comprised of all physical education majors. To alleviate this idea, a brochure (made available through restricted alumni donations) was published and distributed to women students explaining the WICA program. Women throughout the University now take part in the athletic program.

However, this has not been the only communication problem to plague WICA. Not until recently could you find mention that women's intercollegiate athletics existed in any of the local media. Now, occasionally The Post will run an article on WICA.

In spite of these difficulties, the program is marked by dedication and perseverance. Feeling the need for the competition and challenge that athletics provides, the women willingly supplement their expenses out of their own pockets. They feel they should avoid "big business" athletics and develop a new approach to college sports.

Miss Brown, like many people on campus, believes that intercollegiate athletics will have to look at themselves and establish a new philosophy and balance between "big business" sports and the increasing student involvement in minor sports. With athletics facing budget reductions, this could well be the year that a new philosophy and emphasis in the athletic program is developed at Ohio University.

Bob Wren Takes New Job

By Frank Morgan

Ohio Sports Information Director

Bob Wren eased back in his chair, puffed at a familiar cigar, and looked very much like a man with a new lease on life.

The former Ohio University baseball coach for 24 years who resigned at the close of the 1971-72 school year and then went with the Philadelphia Phillies spoke enthusiastically about his new job.

"It's (the Phillies) a new organization with a new manager, general manager and farm director, and I'm very enthusiastic about it," said Bob.

Last June, Wren took a group of college all-stars to Hawaii and Japan on a goodwill baseball junket, then the first of August reported to Clearwater, Fla., where the Phillies have an elaborate baseball complex.

"I am a coach in the instructional league for them. We have many top young players who are sent to us for some acceleration in their development," explained Bob.

"We have batting and fundamentals and work with individuals in the mornings and then play a game every day, starting at 1 p.m., with doubleheaders on Saturdays. There are no night games and no Sunday games, and I'm through every day at 4 o'clock. My wife Lois and I may stroll on the beach, go fishing, out to supper or whatever," he said.

Specifically, Wren coaches first base during games, as well as working with all players on base running; bunting; infield and outfield play.

In the off-season, Bob also represents the Worth Co. (a division of Lanham Manufacturing) of Tullahoma, Tenn., one of the largest manufacturers of baseballs and bats in the country.

"Boy, I sleep in now when I feel like it, and I can still keep my home here in Athens, as the Phillies provide us with an apartment in Clearwater," said Wren.

It's a new life indeed for a guy who used to teach, coach, administrate at his alma mater for 24 years. And he seems to be enjoying it, to say the least.

Outstanding Season for Soccer Team

By Paul Hagen

This was a year to remember in Ohio University soccer.

It was a great year that saw Ed Roberts score 18 goals to climax a three-year varsity career during which the native Liberian set every school scoring record and won All-American honors. It was the final season for All-American Andy Smiles, the ever-optimistic Englishman who promoted his sport both on and off the field.

This was the season that Eric Winders blossomed into an outstanding performer.

It was the last time around for people like Steve Bachner, Dennis Blender, Larry Cohen, Gary Statham, Paul Dunn and Dave Frishberg. These people with new coach Tiff Cook three years ago developed the squad into a national power.

So when the team trooped off the field after a 3-1 loss to St. Louis in the third round of the NCAA Tournament, they had already established themselves as one of the top eight university division teams in the country.

The team faced a great challenge this season. Cook was teaching, and Dennis Buford was brought in to coach. The 24-year-old Buford had no coaching experience, and great things had been expected from this team.

When the booters dropped a 3-0 opening game decision to Akron, the grumbling began, but Buford managed to hold the club together, and the team went on to finish with a 10-5-1 record against one of the toughest schedules in the country.

Already six players—Smiles, Roberts, Winders, Statham, Lyle and Bachner—have received All-Ohio recognition, and two—Smiles and Roberts—have been picked to the All-Midwest team. At least four players are in the running for All-American honors.
